

El Sistema USA and Duke: Advancing the Power of Music for Human Development

Adam Beskind<sup>1</sup>, Andie Carroll<sup>2</sup>, Jasmine Leahy<sup>3</sup>, Olivia Neely<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Trinity College (Music/Public Policy), <sup>2</sup>Trinity College (Economics), <sup>3</sup>Trinity College (Neuroscience), <sup>4</sup>Trinity College (Women's Reproductive Health).

What Is El Sistema?

- Model of music education for social change in underserved communities invented in Venezuela in 1975
- Impacts over 2 million young people worldwide
- El Sistema USA (ESUSA), the alliance of US-based programs, was founded in 2014.
- Duke partnered with ESUSA in 2016 to support the organization's emergence through evaluation

Expanding ESUSA

Expanded ESUSA's impact to over 20,000 underserved youth nationwide through:

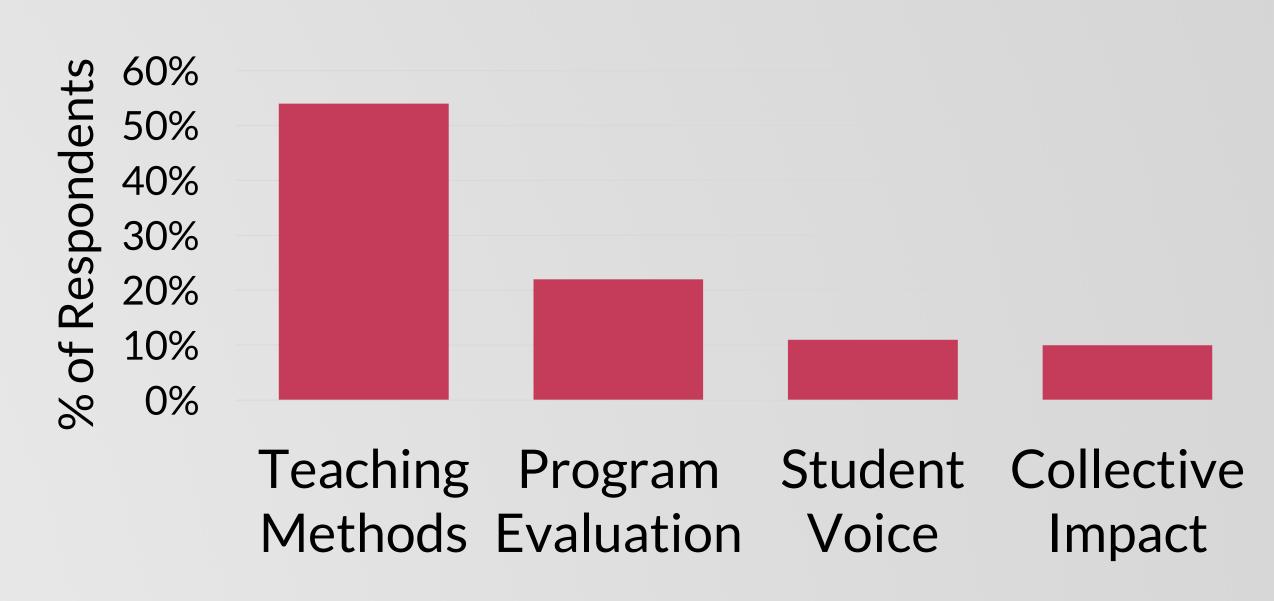

- 1. National symposium: students, teachers, administrators shared & identified best practices, focused on collective impact & racial equity
- 2. Symposium attendee feedback:
  qualitative + quantitative survey to improve future programming and development
- 3. ESUSA Census: Help revise, clarify, and update to better reflect mission, vision, and values

Examples of our Impact

Impact 1: Defined the ESUSA Criteria for Membership through program evaluation (sample related census questions below)

Impact 2: Identified symposium takeaways

Impact 3: Assessed symposium effectiveness of addressing key themes

Conclusions

- Programs feel better supported to implement teaching & evaluative methods, especially, around racial equity and collective impact, so students feel empowered to express themselves musically and verbally.
- Established criteria for membership to maximize impact on students
- ESUSA now more self-aware; able to identify room for growth.